Anglers, Watch For Tags in Fish You Catch

Call in recaptured fish reports to: 757-491-5160.

Important information to include:

- tag number
- kind of fish and condition of fish
- fish length (measured? or estimated?)
- where and when caught
- did it have more than one tag
- fish kept or released (if released did you leave tag in the fish—preferred if practical)
- name, mailing address and phone number

Access the entire series of tagging reports beginning in 1995
on VIMS website

Acknowledgements

The idea for developing and ultimately putting into action the Virginia Game Fish Tagging Program was that of Mr. Claude Bain, III. Retiring September 1, 2007, as director of the Virginia Saltwater Fishing Tournament (VSFT) under the Virginia Marine Resources Commission (VMRC), Mr. Bain approached Jon Lucy at VIMS during the late 1980's about developing a tagging project on red drum.

The species' seasonal movements along the Virginia-North Carolina coasts and into the bay and its tributaries periodically provided quality fishing for boat, surf, and fishing pier anglers. Not only were pan-size fish important, but older year classes of fish supported a growing trophy fishery for 30 to 70+ pound fish. Given the species' importance to Virginia's angling community, Bain was surprised at the lack of data on the drum's use of (and dependence upon) bay habitat.

Characterized by rather erratic increases in abundance in the lower bay, the fishery's nature made it difficult to plan in advance to acquire funding commitments for a red drum tagging study. Therefore, the idea was put on hold. When Virginia enacted its saltwater recreational fishing license program in the mid 1990s, it seemed prudent to revisit the idea. But critical data on habitat use and migratory patterns were not only sparse for red drum in state waters, but also for other key recreational fish, i.e., black drum, cobia, speckled trout, tautog, etc. An angler-assisted tagging program could address these data concerns. With funding support from saltwater fishing license funds, the tagging program began training angler taggers in 1995.

In September 2007, Mr. Lewis Gillingham became the new VSFT Director. As part of his many responsibilities, he took over managing the Virginia Beach office portion of the tagging program. Ann Burnett in that office also deserves special recognition for her exemplary work ethic which keeps daily program activities on track. Since late fall 2007, Mr. Todd Sperling at the VMRC main office in Newport News has updated the program's database into a more efficient format. He maintains the database while fine-tuning it for changing data analyses and output needs.

At VIMS, Ms. Dianne Roberts provides critical assistance to the tagging program designing graphs and materials for tagging training workshops. Also in VIMS Marine Advisory Services Program, Ms. Cheryl Teagle coordinates purchasing tags while helping manage the tagging program budget. VIMS Publications Center (primarily Ms. Ruth Hershner) provides critical assistance in preparation of posters aimed at keeping anglers aware of program activities and results. The Center also prepares graphics for annual reports, the VIMS Game Fish Tagging Program web site (also updated by Ms. Roberts), and presentations before scientific meetings, angling groups, etc. Ms. Sylvia Motley in the Publications Center Print Shop handles printing production of annual reports.

The Game Fish Tagging Program is a team effort by many critical players, including the anglers who devote significant time and effort to tagging target fish and reporting fish recaptures.

Virginia Game Fish Tagging Program (VGFTP)--2007

Introduction

Initiated in 1995, the Virginia Game Fish Tagging Program (VGFTP) database is comprised of tagged fish records, and corresponding recaptured fish records. These records are primarily generated through contributed efforts of a dedicated corps of trained marine anglers targeting only a select number of target species. The recaptured fish records are the result of observant individuals noticing the tags in live or freshly-boxed/shipped fish. Recapture reports originate from a mix of sources, including marine anglers, commercial fishers, workers in fish packinghouses, wholesale and retail sellers of fish, and NOAA Fisheries observers on coastal trawl boats.

The program was operated cooperatively from its beginning in 1995 through September 2007 by Claude Bain, now retired Director of the Virginia Saltwater Fishing Tournament (VSFT) under VMRC, and Jon Lucy of VIMS Sea Grant Marine Advisory Program. Since the latter part of 2007, the joint effort continues under the direction of Mr. Lucy and Lewis Gillingham, the new VSFT Director.

The tagging program is funded primarily from state Saltwater Recreational Fishing License funds administered by VMRC. The mechanism for obtaining funding is through submission of annual funding proposals, submitted in early July of each year, for consideration and funding recommendations of the VMRC Recreational Fishing Advisory Board. Annual program funding is divided between the cooperating offices at VMRC and VIMS.

Significant matching funds are also provided by VIMS of the College of William and Mary. There is also additional administrative support provided by VIMS through Virginia Sea Grant Program funds coming to VIMS Marine Advisory Services (via separate funding proposals submitted periodically to the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration's National Sea Grant Program).

Operations

Program logistical responsibilities are shared, taking advantage of the respective organizations' communication links with the marine recreational angling community and strengths in data handling-analysis and graphics-publication production. For example, the VSFT's Virginia Beach location and its regular contact with marinas, tackle shops, and anglers through the citation program makes it the natural partner for receiving and keying tagged and recaptured fish data. In addition, as needed the office mails out tags (taggers are assigned specific tag numbers for program management) tagging guns, tagging applicators, etc.

Fish tag-recapture reports (when and where the fish was tagged, its size, condition, etc. and similar information regarding the recaptured tagged fish) are mailed by the VSFT office to the respective tagger of a reported fish as well as to the person reporting the tagged fish. As indicated previously, if desired by reporters of recaptured fish, with a tagged fish's tag-recapture report also is mailed a "reward" item. Prior to fall 2007, the tag-recapture database was maintained on desktop computers at the VSFT office, with data backed up on CD's and periodically shared with VIMS. As of late 2007, the database has been moved, and is now maintained on a server at VMRC's offices in Newport News.

Ordering of tags, tagging guns, other tagging applicators, materials for making tagging sticks, and construction of measuring boards, are duties carried out by VIMS Marine Advisory Services office. At VIMS, tagged fish data and tag-recapture data records are checked for possible inconsistencies or errors, then summarized and analyzed for production of annual reports (in hard copy and web-based formats). Text, graphics, and data files are maintained and updated in user-friendly formats for anglers as well as fishery researchers and managers. Graphics illustrating fish movement and habitat use patterns are also developed for a variety of educational programming (VIMS Marine Science Day, "Kids Fishing Clinics," science teachers' courses, public presentations to angling clubs, civic groups, etc.).

Data and graphics also are organized in appropriate formats for conducting annual series of four to five Tagging Training Workshops. Typically running two hours during week day evenings, the workshops are required of anglers entering the program. For the workshops various handouts are produced by VIMS illustrating proper tagging techniques specific to the types of tags being used on select fish species. Copies of general and technical articles are also provided to workshop participants showing how program results are used by researchers and fishery managers. Program results are highlighted regarding significant examples of how target fish seasonally, and year-to-year, use Virginia waters. Patterns of dispersal of tagged fish from New England to Florida waters always prove to be a major topic of interest at the tagging workshops.

At VIMS posters are also developed and distributed to tackle shops, boat ramps, fishing piers and marinas alerting the angling community to the program's efforts as well as to special tagging efforts, i.e., to double tagging efforts on select species (for evaluating tag retention of various tag designs both smaller and larger fish specimens). Graphic production at VIMS also supports poster and oral presentations at regional and national scientific conferences.

Target Species: 2002-2007

Target species for 2002-2007 are listed. Summer flounder replaced weakfish in 2000 as significant tagging effort on the latter species never produced greater than a one percent recapture reporting rate (tank-based tag retention trials indicated high tag loss rates over 2-4 week periods).

Special VIMS Tagging Projects

As needed, VIMS conducts tag retention field trials to determine whether changes are warranted in the type of tag used for specific species. Depending upon the range in size of fish, certain tags are more appropriate for "small" fish specimens (like the 2.5 inch T-bar tag used with "tagging gun" applicators) versus large "adult" fish. For example, the T-bar tag is appropriate for juvenile black and red drum, and juvenile cobia up to about 26-28 inches total length. However, as these fish grow up to 50+ inches TL, the smaller T-bar tag is not appropriate for larger specimens. Rather for large specimens of select target species, trained anglers are taught to use a 6.25-inch long stainless steel dart tag (with wire core sheath). The stainless steel dart tag is both retained longer in large fish compared to smaller dart/T-bar tags, as well as being more visible as the fish increases its muscle mass over time.

Utilization of Results and Key Data

The program's data are of interest both to the angling community as well as to fishery researchers and managers. The number and size distribution of target fish tagged each year are of special interest to fishery managers as such data provide useful indicators of the mix of year classes sustaining top ranked recreational fisheries. Such data also provide indications of the relative size distribution of fish being released in various fisheries under ever-changing size and bag limit management regulations.

How the Program Works-Training Experienced Anglers to Tag Select Target Species

The program maintains a corps of experienced, trained angler-taggers who can capitalize on opportunities to focus significant tagging effort on key species, which often suddenly exhibit high levels of abundance during any given fishing season. While contributing significantly to the rebuilding and sustaining of specific fisheries comprising Virginia's one billion dollar marine recreational fishery, such events take on greater value when tagging documents sizes and relative numbers of recreationally-targeted fish occurring in state waters, and the habitats they utilize year-to-year. To make the tagging program more interesting to involved anglers, award plaques are presented annually to those anglers tagging the most fish during the year for the program's target species (see award winners for 2005-2007, Tables 1A, 1B).

As previously referenced, types of tags primarily used by trained anglers are T-bar tags (for smaller fish specimens) and stainless steel dart tags (for larger fish). These tags, along with their respective tagging applicators, are shown in Fig. 1. The broader mix of tags being tried in a several species where tag loss problems are being examined, i.e. sheepshead, sub-adult red drum, and adult speckled trout, are shown together on a single page in Appendix A. The top photo on this page shows the T-bar tag, dogleg dart tag, a small conventional dart tag, and the stainless steel dart tag such that the tags' size and different anchor elements can be visually compared. The middle photo shows the T-bar tag and an internal anchor tag, the most often used tag combination when double tagging sub-adult red drum and adult speckled trout to evaluate tag loss issues with the T-bar tag in these two species.

The bottom photo shows something quite different. Here one sees a “short” T-bar tag compared to a normal length tag. This situation occurs whereby an angler catching a tagged fish has clipped off only the end of the tag which contains one of the tag’s unique duplicate set of numbers (the tag number also is printed at the base of the tag closest to where it is anchored in the fish’s muscle). This situation occurs most often when a tagged fish is undersize, the angler therefore wants to release the tagged fish alive, but the angler also wants to accurately report the recapture of the tagged fish (and receive a hat, tackle organizer, or T-shirt as a “reward” for doing so). Clipping the end off the tag allows the angler to keep the tag tip, thereby reducing the chance for any error in reporting the tag number correctly when calling in the fish’s recapture to the program’s Virginia Beach office.

Because the middle portion of the tag has the telephone number to call to report the fish’s recapture (the telephone number follows the word “REWARD”), and the tag still carries its tag number at the base of the tag, the undersize fish being released still has a useable tag in it with all the information needed for reporting it if recaptured again. Such instances, when they occur, provide the tagging program the unusual opportunity of having two distinct recaptures reports on the same fish at different points in time. This type of data can help either better define site fidelity patterns the fish may exhibit for certain areas or, if the fish moves a great deal, help clarify what mix of areas the fish utilizes while in Virginia waters.

Broad Objectives

The tagging program works towards accomplishing several broad objectives:

- Involving the angling community directly in collecting hard data on movement, site fidelity, and habitat use patterns for species supporting major marine recreational fisheries in Virginia, as well as throughout the mid-Atlantic region.
- Working with trained anglers to collect tag-recapture data on key recreationally targeted fish in Virginia waters which will fill gaps in information needed by researchers and fishery managers in developing, or updating, fishery management plans.
  - Data generated helps better define local movement and habitat associations for species within a given year, and over periods of multiple years.
  - Data are obtained on species’ seasonal migration patterns, including fish migration corridors (physical locations, temporal parameters, types of habitat used, etc.).
  - Chesapeake Bay and Virginia barrier island waters provide major seasonal feeding areas, and sometimes even spawning areas, for certain important recreationally targeted species. Collecting data to better understand and manage healthy fish populations in Virginia also ultimately contributes to improved and sustainable recreational fisheries in neighboring states, and across broader geographical regions.

- While fish equal to or exceeding legal size limits are often tagged by the program, except for cobia, the majority of fish tagged are under legal size (or in the case of red drum outside the allowable slot limit). Therefore, tagged fish data help provide useful indicators of abundant year classes of key species entering Virginia's marine recreational fisheries and the size distribution of certain species being released in a given year by Virginia's marine anglers.
- The tagging program also works in concert with the saltwater angling community to collect and analyze tag-recapture data, data which provide convincing evidence that by using proper fish handling and releasing procedures, catch and release fishing is a management tool which helps sustain and improve angling fisheries.
  - Tag-recapture results help expand angler understanding regarding the "payback" which can result from complying with fishery size and bag limit regulations. Tag-recapture data also help support research demonstrating that many marine fish, when caught on appropriate tackle and handled carefully, have relatively good rates of survival when released. Such data also help anglers understand that for many of the fish they release, while some may be ultimately caught by commercial fishers, most are caught again by anglers.

Key Results

Examples follow to illustrate what the program is accomplishing. Through the combined effort of trained anglers tagging select target species across major popular fishing areas in Virginia bay and offshore waters, hard data are being acquired on (1) how and when species seasonally important to Virginia's coastal anglers use local waters, (2) juvenile and adult fishes' long-term habitat preferences while in state waters, and (3) defining waters and fish habitats beyond Virginia's borders important to sustaining fish populations on which the state's marine angling fishery depends.

- Flounder tagged in Chesapeake Bay and Chincoteague Inlet waters consistently demonstrate that for fish tagged in a given year, the majority of recaptures within the tagging year (roughly up to sometime in November of the tagging year) show the flounder (mostly 12-13 inches up to 18 inches, or "sub-legal fish" in 2007) remain associated closely with their original tagging sites. This is particularly the case for flounder tagged at fishing piers, rock jetties, and structure sites such as artificial reefs, shipwrecks, and bridge-tunnel complexes. In the year following being tagged, a majority of tagged fish typically return to (and/or have over-wintered in) Virginia's bay and nearshore waters. However, approximately 1-3% of tagged flounder captured the year following being tagged, rather than found back in Virginia bay and coastal inlet waters, are reported during late winter-spring-summer months either offshore Virginia-North Carolina, or along coastal beaches and inlets ranging from Myrtle Beach, SC northward to New York and Connecticut.

It is interesting to compare tagged flounder results from the Game Fish Tagging Program with previous VIMS flounder tagging studies completed in the late 1980's and mid 1990's under Dr. J. Musick (see Kraus, R. T. and J. A. Musick, 2001. A brief interpretation of summer flounder, Paralichthys dentatus, movements and stock structure with new tagging data on juveniles. Marine Fisheries Review 63 (3): 1-6). The tagging program's data set is more robust (contains many more recaptured fish data) than the older VIMS studies. This is due both to the Virginia Game Fish Tagging Program (VGFTP) having tagged more flounder (53,629 fish from 2000 to 2007) than the two studies combined (about 23,000 fish). In addition, compared to the earlier VIMS studies, which used trawl-caught flounder for tagging, the VGFTP flounder tagging effort has higher recapture reporting rates as well (8.7%-10.0% as of the end of 2005, 2006, and 2007, respectfully).

The VGFTP flounder recapture rates are also higher than the reported 7.1% rate for the American Littoral Society's (ALS) angler-assisted flounder tagging effort from 1983 to 1999 (reported in Kraus and Musick 2001). Over the 16-year period, ALS taggers released 32,997 flounder from which 2,350 recaptures were reported. The VIMS 1987-1989 tagging study had a 5.5% recapture reporting rate from tagging 12,323 flounder (Defossee, J.C. 1995. Movements and ecology of summer flounder, Paralichthys dentatus, tagged in the southern Mid-Atlantic Bight. Ph.D. dissert. 187 p., VIMS, School of Marine Science, College of William and Mary, Gloucester Pt. Va., 186 pp.). The 1995-1997 tagging study focused only on juvenile flounder and had only a 2.5% recapture rate (261 recaptures from 10,607 young flounder tagged in Chesapeake Bay and seaside tidal creeks/lagoons). These results are reported in Kraus and Musick (2001) and Kraus, R. T. 1998 (Tagging and habitat utilization of juvenile summer flounder, Paralichthys dentatus. M.S. thesis. VIMS, School of Marine Science, College of William and Mary, Gloucester Pt., Va., 148 p.).

In general, to date results from the VGFTP support the seasonal migration patterns for Virginia flounder observed in the two earlier VIMS studies. Some portion of tagged flounder from Virginia bay and inshore Eastern Shore move offshore during late fall to winter onto the continental shelf, then move back inshore into bay and Eastern Shore inlet waters during late winter-spring. Also some small percent of Virginia tagged founder also disperse latitudinally north and south of Virginia. Some tagged flounder move south off North Carolina and into Outer Banks inlets while others move north as far as offshore New York-Connecticut and into Long Island Sound and New Jersey inlets. However, the VGFTP flounder results also show an occasional Virginia tagged flounder moving as far south as Myrtle Beach, SC (two fish). During 2006 and 2007 respectively, the VGFTP also had one and five flounder recaptures reported from waters offshore Rhode Island.

- Adult cobia tagged inside the bay continue to be recaptured occasionally months to years post tagging outside the bay. Three fish have been recaptured off North Carolina's Outer Banks beaches/inlets (two cobia on Wimble Shoals, one in 2000 and another in 2002, and one off Cape Lookout in 2007). Five cobia recaptures have occurred along Florida's east coast, i.e. single recaptures coming from Jacksonville to Melbourne in 1998, 2000, 2001, 2002, and 2004. Interestingly, there have yet to be any tagged cobia recaptures reported from either South Carolina or Georgia waters. An adult cobia tagged in the bay at York Spit in 2000 was recaptured in the Gulf of Mexico in 2004 at an oil/gas platform about 36 miles southeast of the Mississippi River delta, the longest distance a tagged cobia has been documented to move throughout its range. Because cobia spawn in Chesapeake Bay, it is significant that since 1995-1996, over 25 adult cobia tagged in the bay have been recaptured back in the bay after 1-5 years at large. As has occasionally happened in past years, a cobia measuring 36 inches was recaptured June 16, 2007, in the bay (off Hampton by angler, M. Stafford) that had been tagged by Mississippi's Gulf Coast Research Laboratory tagging program headed by Dr. Jim Franks. The cobia had been tagged April 1, 2006, off Port Canaveral on Florida's east coast (it was about 25 inches when tagged by angler, F. Martin). Therefore angler-assisted tagging results from cobia tagged both in Florida and Virginia are helping document the movement of fish between extreme north and south points along this 700+ miles of coastline.
- During 1999, 2000, 2002, 2003, 2006, and 2007, significant year-classes of juvenile and sub-adult red drum have been documented by VGFTP tagging data to contribute significantly to Virginia's marine recreational fishery. Good numbers of adult fish have also entered Virginia's fishery in more recent years, again the case in 2007. During the mild winters of 2006 and 2007, sub-adult drum appeared to over-winter inside Rudee Inlet on the Virginia Beach oceanfront, a phenomenon reported to occur occasionally by Rudee anglers with years of fishing experience. Drum were tagged inside Rudee throughout the first half of December 2005, then a few fish tagged again from December 21, 2005 through January 1, 2006, and finally tagging resumed on the same size class of fish from March 12-20 on through spring 2006. Similarly, sub-adult drum were tagged inside Rudee from December 18, 2006 through January 25, 2007, then again from March 4, 2007 through the remainder of the month. However, winter 2007, once again considered milder than normal, failed to show the drum over-wintering pattern in Rudee Inlet. The last red drum tagged inside Rudee during fall-early winter 2007 was on Nov. 28-30, while the first few drum tagged in late winter/early spring 2008 were not tagged until March 13-21, 2008.
- The contribution of strong year classes of speckled trout to the recreational fishery has likewise been confirmed by tagging efforts during 1995, 1999, 2002, and 2004-2006, and 2007. As with sub-adult red drum, speckled trout over-wintered in the area of lower bay power plants during both cold and mild winters. From December 2007 through March 2008 the Elizabeth River Hot Ditch area provided one of the best speckled trout tagging opportunities in years. In January 2006 (January 15th) large concentrations of speckled trout were tagged associated with the Hampton Roads Bridge Tunnel where surface water temperatures ranged from 46-50 F. However, during December 2007 through January 2008, the occurrence of adult trout in the same area was very inconsistent, resulting in insignificant tagging opportunities.

- With Chesapeake Bay largely the northern range of significant angling fisheries for red drum and speckled trout, rather discrete, episodic fall migrations of Virginia-tagged fish occur to North Carolina waters with numerous fish moving distances of 30 to 200+ miles in 3-90 days post tagging. This means such fish are covering estimated “straight-line distances” of 1-5 miles, sometimes even 6-15 miles per day given the time lapsed between when the fish were tagged and when they were reported recaptured.
- Through 2007, tagging effort on tautog in Virginia Bay and offshore waters resulted in nearly 14,000 fish being tagged. From this effort over 2,100 recaptures resulted. Tag-recapture results for tautog continue to document that the fish do not undergo consistent seasonal movements inshore in spring and offshore during fall-winter (the pattern in waters from New York to Rhode Island). More importantly, fish tagged in Virginia bay and offshore waters show no distinctive northward migration over time. Through 2007, only 0.1% of all tautog recaptures have occurred in waters north of the Virginia-Maryland border (were the border to be extended eastward through nearshore and continental shelf waters).

2007 Accomplishments Overview

Regarding tagging effort during 2007, just over 18,400 fish were tagged across ten target species, exceeding the record setting effort in 2006 (Figs. 2-4; Table 4). The record number of fish tagged during 2007 also resulted in a record 2,300 recaptures. Anglers, charter captains and head boat mates, trained observers on trawlers, commercial fishers, fish packing-fish retail businesses, etc., all contributed to reporting tagged fish.

For a broader perspective over recent years, from 2005-2007 database records accounted for just over 10,000, 16,000, and 18,000 fish tagged, respectively, across ten target species (Fig. 5B; Table 4). The increase in recent years is in part due to improvements in specific fisheries, as well as a trend showing program participation since 2005 staying up around its desired maximum level of 200 taggers (Fig. 5A). During 2005-2007, recapture files numbered nearly 1,000, 1,900, and 2,300 records, respectively. Overall cumulative recapture rates for each of the three years range from about 9-10 % (table 4). At the end of 2007, cumulative recapture rates by species ranged from a low of about 2% for speckled trout to a high of 14.5% for tautog (Fig. 4).

For the tagging program to accomplish its objectives, large numbers of fish have to be tagged at key fishing locations. During 2007 eighteen anglers tagged a total of 50-100 fish each, 19 anglers tagged 100-200 fish each, 14 anglers tagged 200-400 fish each, and 6 anglers tagged 500-750 fish each. Two especially dedicated anglers tagged over 4,300 and nearly 1,300 fish each, respectively (see taggers receiving annual conservation certificates for tagging 25 or more fish during 2007, Tables 2A, 2B).

The increased tagging effort during 2007 likewise generally produced increases in numbers of recaptured fish reports. Program anglers are likewise given recognition each year for their tagging resulting in five or more recaptured fish reports. From Figures 3A and 3B, one can see three taggers had 50-99 recaptures during the year, three had 100-200 recaptures each, and one tagger's efforts produced over 700 recaptures. The pattern of tagging effort per angler over a range of effort intervals for 2004-2007 is more clearly defined in Figure 5C. By the end of 2007, the program's database included over 140,800 tagged fish records and just over 12,700 recaptures of tagged fish, an overall cumulative reporting rate of 9%.

Training of Taggers

Tagging Training Workshops for new taggers were held at five different locations from late February through late March 2007 (VIMS-Gloucester Point campus, VIMS Eastern Shore-Wachapreague campus and Cheriton-two back to back workshops, Virginia Beach-Ocean East Tackle II, and Hampton-Bass Pro Shops the host). As usual, trained anglers active in the program during 2007 had to notify program coordinators they wanted to continue with the program for 2008. This "re-registration" requirement serves two purposes. It allows those who might lose interest in tagging for whatever reasons to ease out of the program gracefully (we dropped 42 taggers from our roll for 2007). The process also provides guidance regarding how many new participants can be brought onboard during training workshops. From the five tagging training workshops we added 72 new taggers to the program (compared to about 35 in 2007 from four workshops). Training sessions in 2008 resulted in the highest participation level to date in the tagging program (208 anglers).

In addition to updates on program results, new taggers receive detailed instructions on recording and reporting tagged fish data including use of water-resistant data sheets. They also learn catching, handling, and hook-removal protocols required to minimize stress in fish. Experienced taggers also share their experiences on such issues and how to avoid mistakes in recording tag numbers and total lengths for fish tagged.

New taggers also are walked through proper tagging techniques using the Hallprint T-bar tags (for fish from about 10-26 inches TL) and stainless steel dart tags (for larger specimens of drums and cobia), with experienced taggers weighing in on tagging techniques found especially workable, especially when catches come in rapidly. Another part of new tagger training (and something interesting to existing taggers), are photos and samples of fouled tags from fish. We go over how best to scrape off fouling so that tag numbers are not destroyed such that they usually can be read successfully (see Appendix A for photo of abraded and fouled tags). Once completing hands-on" tagging trials with freshly iced fish, new taggers receive a limited number of tags, a tagging gun (for T-bar tags) and/or tagging needle plus tagging stick (for stainless steel dart tags), measuring boards, and data sheets.

Database Use 2006-2007

Tagging results are periodically used by researchers and fishery managers to help quantify sizes of target species released under Virginia fishery regulations, data largely lacking from NOAA Fisheries' Marine Recreational Fisheries Statistical Survey. Regarding the tagging program's data on large red, drum, black drum, and cobia, size distribution data on adult specimens of these species enhance VIMS ChesMMAP trawl survey data aimed at sampling greater numbers or adult fish in bay than possible with VIMS Juvenile Fish Trawl Survey. Information on fish movement and habitat use patterns in Virginia waters continues to improve. The angling community is particularly interested in within-season and season-to-season movement of fish tagged. Tag-recapture results spread through the angling community through word of mouth, talks to fishing clubs, and visits to VIMS Game Fish Tagging Program web site. Reports of recaptured fish (and associated information on when and where the fish was tagged) are regularly sent both to taggers and anglers reporting tagged fish. Such reports help keep the angling community interested in the tagging program, including reminding anglers to be on the lookout for tags whenever they catch fish targeted by the program. The reports also provide hard evidence to the angling community that catch and release conservation practices, whether voluntary or a result of fishing regulations, make for better fishing in the future.

Special Use of Program Data on Speckled Trout:

During summer 2007, a North Carolina Division of Marine Fisheries biologist (Ms. Beth Burns, Wanchese) requested to review the program's tag-recapture data on speckled trout (spotted seatrout) for the period 1995 through 2006. The state was planning to develop a Fishery Management Plan for the species, and the only known tagging data showing fish seasonally moving between North Carolina and Virginia was that of the Virginia Game Fish Tagging Program. Determining that year-to-year, approximately 15 % of trout tagged in Virginia waters were recaptured in North Carolina waters, the decision was made to include both Virginia and North Carolina waters in the geographical coverage of the management plan. Plans are now underway for a preliminary tagging study of spotted seatrout in North Carolina to be initiated in mid-summer 2008 which then will carry over into 2009.

Data Uses: Red Drum

Data on tagged red drum were requested by VMRC during spring 2007, and again in summer 2008. The red drum data are being considered, along with other data, for providing Virginia's input to the updating of the species' stock assessment.

Data Uses-Ties to New Research: Summer Flounder

Given the obvious association of flounder to structure in the bay, it is important to clarify how flounder actually use structure-based habitat areas in the bay. If such areas provide long-term, seasonal aggregation areas for juvenile and adult fish, such areas could then be significant in contributing towards overall rebuilding of the flounder population in the mid-Atlantic region.

Building upon the flounder tagging program's data, VIMS initiated a study aimed at clarifying the interaction of flounder and structure-associate habitat areas ("Understanding Localized Movements and Habitat Associations of Summer Flounder in Chesapeake Bay Using Passive Acoustic Arrays"). Acoustic data have been analyzed from buoyed hydrophones tracking flounder movement from June 2006 through late March 2007 at three sites (Gloucester Point Fishing Pier, Back River Artificial Reef, and a non-structure area at York Spit off the mouth of the York River). Surgically implanted with small acoustic transmitters, 120 legal and sub-legal flounder, equally divided among the three sites, have now been documented to exhibit rather complex movements in the vicinity of, and among the study sites.

As a result of the acoustic tagging data from flounder released in the vicinity of the Gloucester Point Fishing Pier in the lower York River, it was learned that tagged fish move significant distances away from the pier much sooner after being tagged and released than assumed to be case based upon VGFTP results from conventional tag-recapture data. In fact some founder tagged at the pier during late June-early July 2006 were observed detected sometimes within weeks of being tagged by hydrophones at the York Spit study site, then ultimately at the Back River Reef Site.

The longest site fidelity record for a flounder in the study associated with a specific study site was a fish initially released at the Back River Reef on June 20, 2006. Throughout the study, it was only detected by hydrophones at its release site, being detected almost continuously from late June through the end of September 2007. Not detected anywhere from October 2006 through April 2007, it was again picked up on the Back River Reef hydrophones for two weeks in May 2007. The May detections of this fish were from three hydrophones having lost their surface buoys to boat traffic such that they had to ultimately be located on the bottom by VIMS divers and removed for downloading of their data the first week of June 2007. The fish was recaptured by an angler again on the Back River Reef on April 19, 2008, just two months short of when it was first released. While the fish was legal size and killed for eating, having its yellow T-bar tag still anchored in the thick muscle near its tail fortunately resulted in its recapture being phoned into VIMS.

The results of the acoustic tracking project were compared with the tagging program's results from the Gloucester Point Fishing Pier and shared with the scientific community through both poster and oral presentations at the American Fisheries Society's Annual Meeting in September 2007. The poster title was, "Observations from Conventional Tagging and Acoustic Telemetry: Site Fidelity and Movements of Summer Flounder Near a Fishing Pier in the York River, VA (M. Henderson and J. Lucy, authors). The oral presentation was titled, "Monitoring Localized Movements and Habitat Use of Summer Flounder in the Chesapeake Bay Using Passive Acoustic Telemetry (M. Henderson, M Fabrizio, and J. Lucy authors).

More comprehensive analyses of the acoustic tracking results are still in progress. Additional updated analyses were also presented at another scientific meeting ("Advances in Fish Tagging and Marking Technology") in February 2008 to again garner feedback from fellow researchers. The oral presentation was titled, "Localized Movements of Summer Flounder in Chesapeake Bay Determined from Passive Acoustic Arrays" (Mark J. Henderson, Mary C. Fabrizio, Jon A. Lucy authors). Highlights of the projects results have also been shared and discussed with VGFTP angler-tagger J. Leiffer. Mr. Leiffer assisted the project with catching flounder for surgical implanting of acoustic transmitter tags at the York Spit and Back River Reef study sites.

Issues of Concern 2007

A. Tag Retention Concerns in Speckled Trout and Red Drum

Adult Red Drum Recapture Rates Improve

Beginning in 2001 the program started training taggers in the use of Hallprint stainless steel dart tags for use in large adult specimen's of red drum, black drum, and cobia. This tag design had been used since the 1990's by North Carolina Division of Marine Fisheries staff, and the volunteer angler taggers they provide tags to for assisting in tagging adult red drum. The current tag design has stainless steel wire running from the tag's anchor dart up through the tag's vinyl streamer. This makes the tag streamer more durable regarding possible abrasion as well as able to better withstand the "flexing motion" the tag undergoes while the fish is swimming.

Regarding results with adult red drum, the change from smaller dart tags to the more robust, stainless steel dart tag improved recapture rate reports from 0 to 1.8% (1995-2001) then to 2.5-3% in 2002-2003 and 2005 (see Table 12). Since changing over largely to the stainless steel dart tag, the VGFTP has typically received as many recapture reports of tagged adult red drum 1-2 years following the year in which the fish were tagged as received during the latter 4-6 months of the initial tagging year.

While it would be preferred to achieve greater than a 2-3% recapture reporting rate on these adult fish from a given year's tagging effort, the tagging program is at least now experiencing a reporting rate comparable to that having occurred with similar types of stainless steel dart tags in North Carolina's adult red drum tagging program. With just over 12,600 adult red drum tagged in North Carolina from 1983-2004 by NC Division of Marine Fisheries researchers and cooperating anglers, the program experienced a recapture reporting rate of 2.4% when combining results from tags in which the streamer had either a monofilament or wire core (Burdick, S., J Hightower, J. Buckel, L. Parramore, and K. Pollock. 2007. Movement and selectivity of red drum and survival of adult red drum: an analysis of 20 years of tagging data. Completion Report, NC Sea Grant, Dec. 2006, 80 p.).

Sub-Adult Red Drum Tag Retention Trials Show Promising Results

We are continuing to conduct field trials to examine tag loss concerns in sub-adult red drum by double-tagging fish with various combinations of dart, T-bar, and internal anchor tags (see Appendix A for T-bar-internal anchor tags and T-bar-dogleg dart tags used in combination for double-tagging trials in both red drum and speckled trout). During 2007, 66 recapture reports of double-tagged red drum resulted from releases of 327 multi-tagged fish, most of which were double tagged with a few larger fish carrying three tags. This recapture rate of 20.2% is close to double that (11.0%) for single tagged sub-adult red drum tagged during the same year.

For tag retention trials, only 2-3 taggers did all the tagging and we primarily used T-bar tags at the base of fish's second dorsal fin in combination with an internal anchor tag placed in the lower abdominal wall on the same side of the fish. The internal anchor tag is inserted through the "belly muscle wall" by making a small incision with a scalpel. Late in 2007 we also began double-tagging red drum with dogleg dart tags in combination with T-bar tags, placing the former at the base of the first dorsal fin and the latter along the base of the second dorsal fin (see Appendix A for the two types of tags; also in the Appendix A see the yellow poster alerting Virginia and North Carolina anglers to be on the alert for double tagged red drum as well as speckled trout). From the few recaptures of drum occurring by the end of 2007 in which the dogleg dart tag was used, the tag is largely staying put for periods of 30-90 days. Naturally longer times at large are needed for better evaluation of this tag. It is readily anchored in the fish using a hollow tagging needle fixed to 6-8 inch long tagging stick.

Speckled Trout Double-Tag Retention Trial Results Helpful--But Recapture Numbers Low

Some positive results are also developing from double-tagging field trials with speckled trout. During 2007, 18 recaptures resulted from 334 double tagged trout (10-23 inches TL) tagged during 2007. This recapture reporting rate of 5.4%, while still lower than desired, was slightly better than the recapture rate for single-tagged trout in the same period (33 of 2,045 fish for a discouragingly low recapture reporting rate of only 1.6%). Of course, the slight improvement in reporting of double-tagged trout could, in part, be due to nothing more than a fish carrying two tags being easier for anglers to spot. Also, in the angling community a double-tagged fish, when observed with both tags, is often considered to be of special importance and, thereby more likely to be reported, another "factor" possibly contributing to a higher reporting rate for such fish. But such issues were largely insignificant for the higher recapture rates for double tagged speckled trout given the majority of such trout were only reported having one of its tags present. To date, the low number of recaptures in 2007 of double tagged trout plus the mix of different tags retained in the fish make it difficult to yet determine what type of tag might prove better for trained angler taggers to go to with this species. Double tagging of trout will continue during fall 2008 and, to the extent possible during winter 2008, at power plant warm-water discharge areas.

B. Sheepshead: T-Bar Tags Not Adequate for Species

The T-bar tag, the primary tag used for all small to medium size target species, is not producing recapture results in sheepshead. Plans continue to replace it with a single barb, plastic tip dart tag during 2008. In 2006 just over 150 sheepshead (18-22 inches total length) were tagged at the Chesapeake Bay Bridge Tunnel. With repetitive fishing and tagging occurring in much the same area, no recaptures occurred. This indicates the T-bar tags are possibly being abraded against barnacle-encrusted structure or in some other way being lost from the fish. Consulting with our tag manufacturer, Hallprint, the indicated dart tag has produced recapture results elsewhere in Sparidae (porgy) species. Therefore small dart tag and/or dogleg dart tags will be tried on the species. Unfortunately the fishery developed poorly during 2007 so there were few opportunities for taggers to try the dart tag. Hopefully 2008 will turn out better.

Database Revamping

Still in its original format since 1995 (FileMaker Pro), the database began experiencing serious problems in summer-early fall 2007. Unexplained crashes of the database began occurring, causing numerous problems, i.e., loss data having to be re-entered, delays in reporting tag-recapture results to anglers, etc. With the assistance of Mr. Todd Sperling of VMRC, the database was reformatted (CSV format) and placed on a server at VMRC in Newport News where it is maintained and backed up on a regular basis. Data entry screens were changed for more efficient keying of data, and the Virginia Beach office began operating as a "satellite location" for data entry. Tag-recapture reports were streamlined, and several basic data summary reports were programmed for quick retrieval. Mr. Sperling continues to make improvements in the database resulting in more efficient data entry. The Database is being designed with the ultimate goal of allowing taggers, who meet avidity and computer-literacy skills, to directly enter their own tagging data much like VMRC's online Fishermen's Log (Mr. Sperling was primarily the lead designer on this project).

Experimental trials were also underway in early 2008 to set VIMS up as a satellite data entry location. Since March 2008 VIMS Marine Advisory Services staff has become more proficient at entering tagged fish data. Now that remote data entry is working for VIMS, trials have been begun with select taggers to allow them to enter their own tagged fish data. Ultimately they will be able to review and save their tagged fish records. The key to success in this area is to maintain strict adherence to taggers being assigned specific tag number series, taggers' tag number series then being the key to accessing the database.

Accomplishments 2007-Highlights by Species

Compared to 2006, during 2007 increases in numbers of tagged fish occurred for black drum, black sea bass, flounder, gray triggerfish, sheepshead (nearly all juvenile fish at the Yorktown Power Plant warm-water discharge canal), spadefish, and speckled trout. Compared to 2006, declines in tagged fish numbers occurred for cobia, red drum, and tautog.

Black Drum

Most 2007 recaptures of black drum represented juvenile fish tagged at the Yorktown Power Station during fall-early winter 2007. Most juvenile black drum tagged at the power plant canal were recaptured within 1-40 days post tagging. Some multiple recaptures also occurred at the canal. Interestingly, two juvenile black drum tagged during October 2007 in the canal moved out of the canal, being recaptured in at Kitty Hawk, North Carolina and in the lower portion of Pamlico Sound in the Neuse River. Unrelated to the canal drum tagging, a juvenile black drum tagged during October 2007 in the Sandbridge surf was recaptured at Nags Head, North Carolina only five days post tagging. As in the case of sub-adult red drum, looking at longer-term tag-recapture data (1995-2007) for sub-adult black drum shows the patterns of summer-fall, southern movement along the coast to North Carolina are similar. During late summer-fall, sub-adult black drum can move rather quickly from Virginia to North Carolina waters (Table 5; Fig. 6).

At the invitation of organizers of the First Annual World Black Drum Fishing Tournament, held in May 2007 at Cape Charles, tagging program coordinators experimented with a brief afternoon tagging training program for interested captains the day before fishing began. While a number of boat captains participated in the training (using large, stainless steel dart tags designated for large drum and cobia), only a few fish were ultimately caught during the tournament. Therefore only a few large drum were tagged at the event. However, two of the tournament tagged fish were recaptured in less than two weeks of tagging, one being killed and the other released without its tag.

However, for the Second Annual World Black Drum Fishing Tournament in May 2008, the black drum catch was very good. A special Conservation Award was presented to the boat tagging the most black drum. Tagging and releasing 8 trophy-size black drum during the 2-day event, the winning boat was captioned by a Game Fish Program tagger. Figure 7 shows a general pattern for recaptures of adult black drum in the lower Chesapeake Bay. The pattern is similar to that for cobia recaptures in that the adult fish show relatively consistent site fidelity to certain fishing grounds within the year they were tagged. Also like the cobia recapture data, the fish also show site fidelity to well-known fishing grounds from year to year (in one case the pattern occurred for a fish at large for two years). Adult black drum recaptures from 1997 through 2007 (Table 6) illustrate the site fidelity patterns just described as well as occasional examples of a few Virginia-tagged adult drum moving to North Carolina waters.

Black Sea Bass

The majority of tagging occurred at the Chesapeake Bay Bridge Tunnel (CBBT), Back River Reef, Gloucester Point Fishing Pier, York River Coast Guard Pier, in Lynnhaven Inlet area waters, and at several lower bay and nearshore wrecks. Most recaptures occurred at the tagging location within 2-8 weeks post tagging. Some multiple recaptures also occurred. From tagging during 2006 at the Sea Gull Fishing Pier (CBBT first island), approximately 10 recaptures of sea bass occurred at the bridge-tunnel's third and fourth islands during 2007, nearly one year post tagging. A sea bass tagged during 2006 at the fishing pier also was also recaptured at a wreck off Ocean City, MD, during 2007. See black sea bass tag-recapture records in Appendix B. The tag-recapture records in alphabetical order by species, then by tagging location, and within tagging location they are listed in order of tagging date.

Cobia

As in past years, while only 12 cobia recaptures were reported, they again showed the consistent pattern whereby tagged adult fish return to lower Chesapeake Bay from 1-3 years post tagging (Fig. 8). Of cobia tagged inside the bay during 2004-2006, and recaptured during 2007, nearly all were recaptured again in the lower bay. A 53 inch TL cobia tagged in 2005 in the lower bay (Baltimore Channel Buoys) was recaptured in summer 2007 off Cape Lookout, NC. Three cobia recaptured during 2007 had been gut-hooked when caught and tagged. However, the leaders were cut to take stress off the hooks in the fish and to reduce additional damage from trying to remove the hooks. Such practices have been demonstrated in hook-release mortality studies to sometimes result in such hooks falling out of the fish's oral cavity. Throughout the tagging program numerous recaptures have occurred from tagged cobia which were reported gut hooked but the hooks treated as described. See detailed cobia results for 2007 in Appendix B.

Flounder (Summer Flounder or “Fluke”)

The majority of flounder tagging took place during 2007 at the usual locations, i.e., CBBT islands, Hampton Roads Bridge Tunnel-Off Willoughby Spit, Lynnhaven waters, Rudee Inlet waters, Lower York River (Gloucester Pt. Fishing Pier, York River Coast Guard Pier), and in protected waters associated with the Chincoteague-Assateague channels. At many of these locations there were some flounder tagged during 2006 which were then recaptured in the same general area during 2007. However, most recaptures occurred within the tagging year approximately 5-60 days post tagging.

Table 7, and Figures 9-10, show consistent patterns of summer flounder site fidelity within years, and even year to year for a small portion of recaptures which occur the year following the fish being tagged. Scanning Table 7 also gives one a feeling for the detailed results shown in Appendix B tables whereby most founder tagged at lower bay fishing locations are recaptured again within days to weeks (sometimes even months) at their initial tagging locations. In both Lynnhaven and Rudee Inlets, some flounder tagged in 2006 were again recaptured in the same general area during 2007. However most 2007 recaptures inside these two inlets were fish still found there 5-50 days post tagging. In contrast, during 2007 a few flounder recaptures showed the fish moving around the lower bay as well as moving from the bay to Eastern shore seaside inlets (and also sometimes making the reverse “move”).

As in past years, longer-distance seasonal movements of flounder were observed from favorite fishing locations (Fig. 11 and Table 8). Some flounder tagged at the Gloucester Point Fishing Pier moved significant distances into the bay, as well as moving offshore, e.g., a pier tagged flounder was recaptured at Charleston Beach, Rhode Island, while another was captured off Sandy Hook, New Jersey. A flounder tagged in 2006 in the Ware River (Mobjack Bay) was recaptured in 2007 at Gargathy Inlet (mid-way along the seaside of the Eastern Shore). Several flounder tagged in the Chincoteague Channel area were recaptured at Indian River, DE and off Pt. Judith, Rhode Island. Flounder tagged at the Chesapeake Bay Bridge Tunnel resulted in some recaptures off Ocean City, MD and off Rhode Island (fish tagged in 2005, recaptured in 2007). While in 2006 there was only one recapture of a Virginia tagged flounder in waters off Rhode Island, during 2007 there were five flounder tagged from the bay or behind Wachapreague Inlet recaptured in Rhode Island waters in late spring to summer months.

Comparing the size distribution of flounder tagged during 2007 at the Gloucester Point Fishing Pier (Fig. 12 M, N) with other locations (Fig. 12 A-L) revealed interesting patterns. In general, the great majority of fish tagged were sub-legal fish (as expected) and consisted of 1-2 year classes of fish. However, in mid to late summer (July-August/September) at the Gloucester Point Fishing Pier and Coast Guard Pier tagging sites (Fig. 12 L and N), as well as at the “Off Willoughby Spit-Ocean View Fishing Pier, Etc.” site, the Lynnhaven Inlet site , and inside Rudee Inlet (Fig. 12 F-H), what likely were young-of-the-year flounder began appearing in the fishery. All these locations represent areas where many anglers use smaller hooks as they are fishing for spot and croaker as well as flounder. Therefore, using smaller hooks the anglers are more likely to catch the smaller 4-7 inch flounder which are moving into more shoal waters. It’s impressive to program coordinators that some of the taggers are diligent and patient enough to successfully put T-bar tags in these small fish. Of course, occasionally some of these small tagged flounder become prey of larger flounder. For example, in early September 2006 a small tagged flounder was found in the stomach of a 16.5 inch flounder caught at the Gloucester Point Fishing Pier. The 6 inch flounder eaten by the larger fish had only been tagged 20 days earlier at the pier.

Tagging at the Gloucester Point Fishing Pier resulted mostly in short-term recaptures at the pier, including some multiple recaptures (Fig. 13 A1, A2). The patterns of single, and multiple recaptures, at both the Pier, and the Hampton Roads Bridge Tunnel, were similar in 2006 and 2007 (Fig. 13. A1, A2, B1, and B2; also Fig. 14 A and B). A similar pattern of single and multiple recaptures of flounder was also observed during 2006 and 2007 in Rudee Inlet (Fig.13 C1; C2).

Gray Triggerfish

Most tagging occurred at the Chesapeake Light Tower, at wrecks in the Cape Henry area, and around the CBBT third island. A few triggerfish were tagged and recaptured at the Back River Reef. All recaptures occurred within the year, typically within 7-40 days post tagging at the general location where the fish were initially tagged.

Red Drum

The size distribution of red drum tagged during 2006 and 2007 is shown in Figure 15. One can see a slight progression in the median size of sub-adult fish between the two years. It also is apparent that good numbers of trophy size fish were tagged during both years.

A sub-adult (26 inch TL) drum tagged in Rudee Inlet during 2006 was recaptured during 2007 in Pamlico Sound. Sub-adult red rum were tagged in good numbers in Rudee and Lynnhaven Inlets, at the Little Creek Jetties, at the Elizabeth River Hot Ditch area (including the power plant CEC canal), in the “York River Hot Ditch” (Yorktown Power Plant discharge canal), and at Winter Harbor (just up bay of New Point and beyond Horn Harbor).

As in past years, recaptures occurred both within the initial tagging area over periods of 7-60 days. But numerous recaptures also occurred in NC waters of sub-adult drum tagged during 2006 and 2007 (Tables 9-11; Figs. 16-18). Unlike the episodic movement of sub-adult red drum out of Rudee Inlet during late summer-fall 2006 (Fig. 18), there were only small numbers of such fish showing in Rudee during fall 2007. As a result, the Rudee Inlet pattern did not repeat itself.

Nearly 300 sub-adult red drum were double tagged for tag retention studies. This data is still being analyzed to determine over what “times at large” T-bar tags appeared to have been lost compared to internal anchor tags and dogleg dart tags. However preliminary observations indicate the fish are likely undergoing a significant increase in loss of the T-bar tags after about 10-14 months at large.

Seven adult red drum (32-50 inches TL) were recaptured during 2007. Four of these fish were tagged in 2005 of which three were recaptured in NC waters. One was recaptured at Smith Island Inlet. Of two adult drum tagged during 2006, one was recaptured off Smith Island, the other recaptured in the vicinity of Ocracoke Inlet, NC.

Recapture rates of adult red drum over the course of the entire program are shown in Table 12. While the recapture rate is only 2-3% for fish tagged in any given year, similar data from North Carolina shows Virginia's recapture rates for adult drum tagged with stainless steel dart tags are similar to those in North Carolina (based on 20 years of adult drum tagging results from 1983-2004 in North Carolina).

Table 13 shows site fidelity of adult red drum to favorite Virginia drum fishing locations both within the year the fish were tagged, as well as from year to year (for periods of 1-2 years post tagging). For the period 1996-2007, the table also shows some examples of movement of adult red drum from Virginia to North Carolina waters (also see Fig. 19), and one example of a Virginia tagger releasing a red drum in North Carolina which was later recaptured at Sandbridge. Through the courtesy of the North Carolina Division of Marine Fisheries, Table 14 shows examples of adult red drum tagged in North Carolina from 1986-2007 whereby the fish were eventually recaptured in Virginia waters (also see Fig. 19).

Sheepshead

Compared with previous years, the 2007 sheepshead fishery at the CBBT never became well developed. Only a few adult fish were tagged. However, good numbers of juvenile sheepshead (5-7 inches TL) congregated in the Yorktown Power Plant "Hot Ditch" and were tagged during fall 2007. Most recaptures occurred in 4-24 days post tagging with the fish remaining in the discharge canal area.

Spadefish

Most tagging occurred at the Chesapeake Light Tower offshore, at the CBBT, and at lighted structures inside the bay (Occahannock Range Light, Wolf Trap Light, and York Spit Light). Nearly all recaptures occurred again at the tagging site within 3-30 days post tagging. There were a few instances of movement, i.e., a fish tagged at the Chesapeake Light was recaptured in the bay at Wolf Trap Light, a spadefish moved from the CBBT to off Hoopers Island, MD, and a fish moved from York Spit Light down the bay to the CBBT).

Speckled Trout

Over 2,300 fish were tagged during the year. Of these, 334 were double tagged for tag retention trials. With 18 recaptures of the double-tagged trout in 2007, the recapture rate of the multi-tagged fish was 5.4%, higher than the 1.6% recapture rate for single tagged trout during the same period. The double and triple tagged fish data are being examined to see the periods over which T-bar tags might have been lost from the fish. Indications are the fish may be losing a significant portion of their T-bar tags in only 120-180 days post tagging. In December, nearly 200 trout were tagged in the Elizabeth River CEC canal. Over half of these fish were double tagged. Besides in the Elizabeth River "Hot Ditch canal", significant tagging was done at Lynnhaven and Rudee Inlets, the Little Creek Jetties, Hampton Roads Bridge Tunnel (January 2007), the Yorktown Power Plant "Hot Ditch" canal, the Ware River, and the Piankatank River.

As in past years there was some movement of fish to NC (Table 15; Fig. 20). A trout tagged at the Hampton Roads Bridge Tunnel moved to the Kitty Hawk surf. A trout tagged during 2006 in Lynnhaven moved to Cape Point, North Carolina, but another fish tagged in the same period moved to Mobjack Bay. A fish tagged during 2007 in Lynnhaven moved to Pamlico Sound, and a fish tagged in fall 2007 in the Ware River moved quickly to Harkers Island, North Carolina. A trout tagged in 2006 in Magothy Bay (ES seaside) was recaptured during 2007 at Cape Lookout, North Carolina.

Local bay movement occurred in trout tagged at the Little Creek Jetties, i.e., one moved up bay off Crisfield, Maryland, one to the Elizabeth River Hot Ditch, and one to Rudee Inlet. A trout tagged in January 2007 at the Hampton Roads Bridge Tunnel was recaptured in the Machipongo River (ES seaside) during May 2007. Results are continuing to come in from the winter 2007-2008 tagging in the Elizabeth River Hot Ditch CEC canal. Most recaptures of these fish continue to be either from the canal, or the nearby warm-water area influenced by the canal discharge plume (Deep Creek and adjacent waters of the Southern Branch of the Elizabeth River).

Tautog

The same pattern as previous years prevailed during 2007. The majority of tagging took place at the Back River Reef, the CBBT islands, the Cape Henry Wrecks, the Winthrop Wreck (4 mi. off Virginia Beach), the Chesapeake Light Tower Reef, and the Triangle Wrecks (about 30 miles offshore the bay mouth). Tautog were typically recaptured at their initial tagging sites from months to several years post tagging. The longest times at large were one fish for three years (stayed at the Winthrop Wreck), and five fish for 2-2.5 years (two of these fish remained at the respective second and fourth islands of the CBBT).

Some movement occurred also. A tautog tagged at the Back River Reef moved to the CBBT (tagged 2006, recaptured 2007), however most fish tagged at the reef during fall 2006 were again recaptured there during 2007. Two fish moved into the bay from the Cape Henry wrecks, one to the CBBT and one to the Back River Reef. An unusual case involved a tautog tagged at the CBBT (April 2006) which was recaptured in Croatan Sound, North Carolina in June 2007. A fish tagged at the Chesapeake Light Tower Reef in January 2007 was recaptured at the Triangle Wrecks in March 2007. Two fish tagged at the Triangle Wrecks moved inshore, one to the Cape Henry Wrecks and one to the CBBT. Two tautog tagged in December 2006 at the Winthrop Wreck moved into the bay, both being recaptured at the CBBT in May-June 2007. See the Appendix B tables for detailed tautog tag-recapture events during 2007.

<sup>a</sup> Note: Moving offshore from the Chesapeake Bay Bridge Tunnel and out the Bay mouth, this flounder would appear to have moved an approximate straight line distance of roughly 300-320 n.mi. from the Bay entrance to waters “offshore Rhode Island.” Simply taking this distance and dividing it by the days at large (53 days) indicates the fish would have had to move a “minimum distance per day” of roughly 5.6-6.0 n.mi./day (about 6.4-6.9 statute mi. per day) to have been captured on the date and location reported. Similar “approximate straight-line, daily rates of movement” have been observed in some Virginia tagged speckled trout (juvenile and adult fish) and sub-adult red drum moving from VA to NC waters during late summer-fall-winter periods.

VA Tagged Fish Alert

Please Report Tagged Fish
1-757-491-5160

Virginia Game Fish Tagging Program
Virginia Beach, VA

- Please check Speckled Trout and Red Drum for tags.
- Some fish are DOUBLE-TAGGED.
- Important: If fish has two tags, report BOTH tag numbers.
- If releasing fish alive, consider leaving tag(s) in fish, recording tag number(s) and reporting capture.
- Reward available.

Objective: To document fish migrations between VA and NC waters.

Double-tagging indicates if tag losses are excessive for certain types of tags.

Project funded by Virginia saltwater fishing license funds.

STAINLESS STEEL DART TAG & TAGGING STICK INSTRUCTIONS

Stainless Steel Dart Tag

The "SS" series tag is recommended for large fish (26-28 inches or larger); i.e. adult red drum, black drum, and cobia. The tag consists of orange tubing (5.75 inches long) bearing the tag number on both ends. It is attached to a sharp, pointed metal anchor. A special stainless steel applicator, glued into a hole drilled in the end of a wooden dowel or pole, holds the dart tip in place during the tagging procedure.

How to Apply the "SS" Tag

1. Bring or guide the fish alongside the boat. One person should hold the leader.
2. If you can reasonably net the fish, ease the fish into the boat, keeping it in the net if possible. Lay the fish over a flat ruler or on a measuring board to get as good a straight total length as practical. If fish is too large to net then see below for method of tagging it in the water.
3. Very Large Fish - The tagger should be positioned slightly behind the fish to get a good angle for tagging.

4. Bend tag dart into a curve, then push tagging needle into slot of tag on top of curved dart surface. Work dart point under scales and push into fish's muscle at the base of the dorsal fin.
5. Measuring from fish's snout, make a good estimate of total length (to longest part of tail) and fork length (to fork/middle area of tail).
6. Record the information on the tag card/sheet before tagging another fish.

Tagging fish from a pier or the beach works best with a tagging stick 6-10" long (possibly attached to your belt). A handy trick is to cut a V notch in the opposite end of the stick to assist in removing hooks from thrashing fish.

To mount the tag applicator in the tagging pole, drill a 5/32-inch hold exactly 1½ inches deep being careful that the hole is perfectly aligned with the pole. Place a small amount of strong bonding glue (epoxy works well) in the hole and on the base of the applicator.

Holding the applicator in the middle of its length with vise grips or pliers, center the large end over the hole, driving the applicator exactly 1½ inch down into the pole by hammering on the pliers or vise grips NOT ON THE APPLICATOR.

Hammering on the end of the applicator will close the slot for the tag and usually breaks the applicator.

How to construct a tagging stick for "SS" series tags

Tagging poles are usually made from ¾ to 1-inch diameter wooden dowels. Poles of varying length are needed depending on the type fish intended to be tagged and whether you will be tagging from a boat with low or high freeboard.

*See instructions inside and next page for maximum curve and location of tag.

Notice curve of dart; this increases tag retention.

FOR USE ON RED DRUM OVER 27" LONG TO TAG A FISH WITH A STEEL DART TAG

(Courtesy of NC Div. of Marine Fisheries-Carol Etheridge)

- 1) Lay fish on its side and measure total length (and fork length) from tip of snout.
- 2) Write down the two lengths and the number of the tag you are going to use.
- 3) Be sure steel dart is curved as in picture above. Curve of dart prevents the tag from easily backing out of fish.
- 4) Count down 1 scale row (2nd row) between the leading edge and the middle of the first dorsal fin. Making sure the tag head is turned towards the fish, wedge the point under a scale (may help to remove a scale).
- 5) Hold the applicator at a 45-degree angle and jab in a forward and downward direction. Push the dart in until buried about an inch deep in the flesh and remove the tag applicator. Securing the tag into the fish in this manner helps stabilize the streamer. Shallow tags have a tendency to wallow around, aggravate the entry wound and may back out causing tag loss.

Hallprint Tag Options for Target Species & Fish Reporting Option with T-Bar Tags

(A) T-bar tag—the primary tag used for smaller specimens of target species (flounder of any size always tagged with this tag); anchored in fish using “tagging gun” (see Fig. 1); (B) Dogleg Dart Tag (note tip of tag's barb changes angle)—used with 3 mm OD hollow tagging needle in short tagging stick; showing promising tag retention rates in double tagging trials with T-bar tags in 14-26 inch red drum and speckled trout; also being tried in sheepshead; (C) Small Dart Tag—also used with same tagging needle as (B); being tried in sheepshead; (D) Stainless Steel Dart Tag—used with slotted tagging needle (see Fig. 1); has stainless wire through core of streamer; used for 27 inch and larger red drum, black drum, and cobia.

(A) T-bar Tag—(usually orange, but green tags also used); used with (E) internal anchor tag for double tagging select species; (E) Internal Anchor Tag (yellow and with soft vinyl anchor tab)—a high retention tag inserted through abdominal wall muscle just behind pectoral fin (a scalpel is used to make small incision through muscle); tag only used by 2-3 select taggers for double tagging trials with T-bar Tag secured somewhere along base of second dorsal fin; to date used in 14-26 inch red drum and speckled trout. Occasionally a fish may be “triple tagged” by adding a Dogleg Dart Tag at base of the first dorsal fin.

T-bar Tag—tag of normal length with streamer about 2 inches long; (B) Shorter T-bar Tag—tag streamer only about 1.25 inches long because tip with TAG# on it has been cut off by angler for confirming TAG# when calling in report of recaptured fish. This is often done when catching an undersized tagged fish which is going to be thrown back alive anyway. The TAG# is also duplicated at the opposite end of the tag where it is anchored in the fish, and the tag's remaining middle section still shows “REWARD-Call 757-491-5160.” Therefore the tag is still completely functional; however this can only be done once to a tag. Another option for leaving tag in tact in fish to be released is to write down, or key into your cell phone, both the TAG# and PHONE# on the tag. Release the fish with its tag and call in the tagged fish report to get a reward.

Tags Covered with Algae and Tag Sheaths Discolored or Abraded.

Top tag is new; compare with bottom tag from flounder covered with brownish algae material; usually tag # and phone # can be read by rubbing fouling material off with fingers or gently scraping streamer using finger nail. Try not to scratch streamer's outer sheath as scratches can make #'s hard to read.

Flounder tag appears to be discolored underneath sheath possible due to algae or sun damage—Tag # and Phone # finally determined but hard to read; sometimes removing such tags and using a magnifying lens helps in reading numbers. Tag came from flounder at large almost one year; tagged in July 2007 at the York River Coast Guard Pier and recaptured in June 2008 at the Gloucester Point Fishing Pier.

Two abraded, discolored tags from 23-24 inch red drum recaptured in Avon, NC surf in November 2007 within 9 days of one another; after calls to NC DMF determined not NC tags, the NC anglers K. Newcomber and K. Beck called in recaptures to VIMS; fish had both been tagged at York River Power Plant discharge canal (at 14.5-15.5 inches) in Oct. 2006 and March 2007 by E. Shepherd.

Tag heavily fouled with algae from a 13-15 inch flounder recaptured at the Gloucester Point fishing Pier June 13-19, 2006; fish one of several recaptures from flounder tagged almost exactly one year earlier at the pier; Tagger Ed Shepherd recaptured his own fish, replacing the tag with a new tag. But anglers can rub algae off with fingers and read tag # and phone # for reporting fish and getting a reward.

Tagging and Releasing Fish in Virginia Gets Anglers' Attention from Chesapeake Angler Magazine's Use of Tagged Fish Photos
(cover images used with permission of magazine)

July 2008, Chesapeake Angler Magazine

Quoted from Table of Contents page: "Mac McGee caught this pretty 24-inch release citation speckled trout on June 3rd while fishing in the Mobjack Bay with Capt. Ed Lawrence of Speckulator Charters." What is not mentioned is the fish was "tagged" before being released. Capt. Ed Lawrence is a long-time tagger with the Game Fish Tagging Program and Mr. McGee joined the tagging program in February 2008 through one of its required Angler Tagging Training Workshops. It's possible tagging of the fish was not mentioned when the photo was submitted; also space was needed to identify other angler's cover photo catches.

September 2007, Chesapeake Angler Magazine

BLACK DRUM ON VIRGINIA'S SHOALS

By Chuck Harrison
& Drew Camp

Drew Camp fights
a monster drum.

IF AT FIRST YOU DON'T SUCCEED...
TRY ANOTHER SPOT!

Black drum hang around the edges of the shoal, and although they aren't as aggressive as reds, they do grow massive.

The Fisherman Magazine (Mid-Atlantic Edition, May 29, 2008, Vol. 26, Issue 22) (portions used with permission).

In this article, veteran angler-tagger Chuck Harrison is joined by 10 year old Drew Camp on Captain Stan Gold's charter boat Blind Date for a mid-May day of catching {and tagging-releasing} trophy black drum. While the article demonstrates Chuck Harrison's gift for getting you into the fishing action as if you were there, a special element is on the other side of this page. See Drew's version of the day titled "Plan B & Second Chances" (used with permission of Drew and his parents). Chuck Harrison is shown about to release a 43 inch tagged drum. It is Drew's generation which will soon be the ones safe-guarding our saltwater recreational fishery resources. There is little doubt he will help lead the way!

Plan B & Second Chances by Drew Camp

At the first spot, we had one good hook up, but it came off after about two minutes. After that nothing happened. Just as it was getting dark, we got a call from a friend of Captain Stan who said there was a good black drum bite not far away. We picked up the anchor and ran over. Captain Stan found a really good spot and we dropped anchor. In about 10 minutes my rod went off on a long run and then Mr. Chuck hooked up, too. Mr. Chuck got his to the boat and it measured 43 inches. Captain Stan tagged it and slid it back in the water. I fought mine for another 10 minutes, but I couldn't get it in. It stayed about 20 feet from the boat and then it came off. I was so frustrated.

Captain Stan hooked up next and got his in pretty quick. It measured 45 inches and we tagged it. Things got quiet for awhile and then it was my Dad's turn. He felt the fish nibbling on the bait and slowly cranked the circle hook right into the jaw. His fish swam up current and then turned back. Captain Stan netted the fish; it measured 48 inches and was tagged and released. It was about time to go (home) when we got another bite. Since I had not landed a fish yet, I got another chance. This fish ran up current and then crossed over the anchor line. We had to unzip all the curtains so I could follow the fish around the boat. He fought for about 20 minutes. When Captain Stan said he needed help to lift it in the boat, I knew it was big. It measured 51 inches and it had a 40-inch girth – it is the biggest black drum I have ever caught! We tagged it and released it. It was awesome. We caught all of the drum on clams. Sometimes we put a crab on at the same time, and Captain Stan calls that a "Drum Sandwich."

9.5 inch black sea bass caught with T-bar tag; note brown algae ("grass") partially covering tag # and phone # for calling in recaptured fish; gently rubbing off "grass" makes numbers readable.

Releasing a 17-18 inch double tagged black sea bass on offshore wrecks for studying T-bar tag retention; sea bass recaptured within about 12 months of tagging typically retained both tags, but fish out over longer periods often had lost the T-bar tag (Jon Lucy photo).

Tag Recapture Data 2006 by Species

- a. "Bold italics" indicates multiple recaptures for the same fish.
- b. Such adjacent records are distinguished for individual fish by the records having IDENTICAL Tag Numbers and Tag Dates for a given Tag Location area.
- c. Unusual and especially valuable information results from multiple recaptures of a fish. However this situation can only happen when anglers write down the tag number and tag-reporting telephone number on the tag, then release the fish again with its tag in place.
- d. Most multiple recaptures determine the location of a fish over two distinct times. However, two recaptures of the same tagged fish can even occur within the same day, i.e. this helps document good release survival rates for the species.
- e. However, of more interest are double or triple recapture events for a fish over periods of days, weeks, or even months. Such records help document site-fidelity of the fish to certain habitats, structure sites, etc., important to know in understanding a species' "Essential Fish Habitat" needs for better management of Virginia's recreational and/or commercial fisheries. Likewise, a fish may be using several different areas and/or habitats while in Virginia's Chesapeake Bay and coastal waters. Such needs can vary both by fish size (juvenile fish versus larger adults), time of year, and from Year to year.
